Welcome, New Year

I HAVE written a welcome, a rhythmical welcome. A message glad-hearted and true.

I want you to read it, perhaps you may need it

For it was intended for you.

I have written a greeting, a verified greeting.

With every word pertinent, true.

To welcome the glad year, the merry, the sad year.

The wonderful year that is new.

I have written a welcome, a love-inspired welcome.

Read on 'till the story is through.

This New Year advancing, inspiring, entrancing.

This New Year depends upon you.

Will you make it a treasure and fill it with pleasure.

Its skies of a heavenly hue.

Will your earnest endeavor enshrine it forever.

This wonderful year that is new?

I have written a greeting, a wide-scattered greeting.

The best that my pencil could do.

But the joy and the glory of making its story

A blessing, reverts unto you.

If at last you have crowned it with good deeds and bound it

With kindly intents not a few.

Then through your endeavor you've hallowed forever

This wonderful year that is new.

—L. M. Thornton, in Orange Judd Farmer

Turning the Leaf

"I have not found today so vain Nor yesterday so fair and good That I would have my life again And live it over if I could."

THE first conclusion that a man arrives at when he thinks of the new year is that he will turn over a new leaf, observes Laura Jean Libbey. If he's single he resolves that he'll cut loose from the companions he has had—the jolly fellows who are not just what they ought to be. He makes up his mind that he'll quit turning night into day, larking around until the wee sma' hours and attempting to work the next day. He makes up his mind he'll save money. Instead of going out with the boys he'll hunt up the nice girls whom he knows and spend his evenings with them. From the many he will choose one girl who shall be nearer and dearer yet than all others. He thinks he has had quite enough of bachelor life—in fact that he'll marry and settle down.

The married man's thoughts are along quite a different line. He makes up his mind to cut down the number of clubs to which he belongs and give his wife the new cloak she has been pining for. He will forego the stag rackets that he has been accustomed to join in, telling his wife that he's been to a prayer meeting. He concludes to give his wife a little more pleasure in the way of outings, and to pay her pretty compliments to keep her heart from withering altogether. He'll cease sneering when she speaks of her relatives and refrain from treating them shabbily when they pay her a visit.

The father-in-law's thoughts take a different turn. After long and serious thought on the subject, he concludes that he will shut his eyes to his son-in-law's peccadilloes, give him a helping hand instead of grumbling at the manner in which he is keeping his daughter; that he'll not take sides with either when a family row is on.

The free lance concludes to cross off all the married from his calling list, and to turn his attention to the women who are heart whole and fancy free.

The conductor on the trolley car concludes that he will begin the new year by stopping at just the corner that people want to get off at so that he may gain the thanks of the travelers instead of the upbraidings of irate passengers who are obliged to walk many blocks back.

The roomer who depends on the lunch counter for his daily fare concludes that he will accept a job from any man who is inclined to give him a square deal. The gambler thinks he will turn his attention from the tricks of his trade because gambling is prohibited in his state. He thinks he may pick up a niddle penny by becoming a round revivalist—chasing the de'il 'round the stump. The millman concludes not to stop at the town pump for a drink, the flushing chauffeur concludes to put his name and address in his identification book when he goes joy riding.

But do you think that these men will keep these resolves? It is a good thing to hope.
